Use of this information is left to the discretion of the individual pulling the trigger. We would like to remind everyone that long-term success is likely 90 percent reliant on using sound money management. The other 10 percent might be market genius. Since it is highly unlikely that every trade a trader makes will be a winner, one should determine beforehand when and or where a trading position is wrong and get out if the price is hit. We believe the old adage of keeping with the winners and getting rid of the losers does make a great deal of sense.

Price levels listed here have been compiled using data believed to be accurate. They are available to you for your information and no recommendations are being made.

If interested in talking about these or other related interests email us at cbands@cbandsbrokerage.com

Note Regarding Targets

We find that the target levels are more beneficial as objectives when already in a position either long or short more so than as a price to initiate a new position. Unless of course 1 of 2 things:

1.) a target lines up with another significant price level; 2.) you choose to.
